Still, we are not God. We have no birth, death and afterlife. We are connected to everything by this one river of non-being we call awareness. So, if we're going to get anywhere, we have to separate ourselves from being. We have to become dead, we have to let go. And then, and only then, will we find peace and, ultimately, unity. "Still, we are not God." I have trouble believing in God. I suppose it's because I've had enough weird experiences to make me skeptical. Do you think there is a god? I think everything we call "god" is just an illusion. I think this may be the reason that I've been willing to get into the church. I believe that there's something out there, but it's not god. The god myth is more of a social concept, a concept that people of ancient times needed to explain their pasts. Unfortunately, the illusion is such a powerful thing that many people believe. It's no wonder the church has been so successful. What do you think of theism? I think theistic evolutionism is pretty good. Evolutionary pressures have shaped human consciousness, or at least the brain, and a god must have been a part of the process. What do you think of the idea that there is an afterlife, an ethereal state we go to after our physical death? Maybe there is, maybe there isn't. I don't know if there's an afterlife, but I've had enough experiences that I can't say there isn't one. What do you think about reincarnation? This is a bit of a personal one, so I'll give you the disclaimer that the feelings that come up are more mine 82157476af
